The Philosophy and Principles of the New Party

PHILOSOPHY

The New Party believes that each and every one of us has a shared duty to work towards a progressive, fair and inclusive society and the right to benefit from such a society. The New Party also believes in a society that recognises individuals have their own unique personality and potential. We will support everyone's right to determine their own destiny, and we will promote individual responsibility in preference to state control.

PRINCIPLES

The New Party

- Will uphold the right of all responsible human beings to determine their own destiny
- Will deliver a caring, progressive and fulfilling society which rewards individual responsibility
- Will endorse the right not to suffer, and the duty not to inflict, discrimination on grounds of age, race, colour, creed, disability, gender or sexual preference
- Will deliver an education system that builds character, encourages personal, social and financial responsibility and one which develops the full potential of all
- Will uphold the right to prompt medical care for all, regardless of means
- Will protect the right to live without fear of intimidation or crime
- Will deliver rational and effective government which remains democratic and accountable
- Will remove red tape, bureaucracy and over regulation wherever possible
- Will encourage the creation of wealth and establish the right of every responsible citizen to share in the wealth of the nation
- Will deliver an open and fair system of social security that eliminates poverty yet rewards endeavour
- Will strengthen our national and cultural identity, while promoting racial and religious tolerance and cultural integration
- Will promote a positive, pro-active and responsible custodianship of the environment
- Will steadfastly pursue these principles at home and abroad
